FROM PAPER TO PEOPLE: THE ART OF PURPOSEFUL COMMUNITY PLANNING

By Stesha Lev F. Tamangen

Development communication is communication with a purpose. It is not about making things perfect, but making things work for the people. Just between the quiet fog of Burnham Park and the busy streets of Legarda, the important work of Barangay Burnham-Legarda, we assist with strategic keyboards, collaborative planning and productive teamwork.

Under the leadership of Punong Barangay Teodoro C. Castro and the unity of the Barangay Council, they have moved past simple administration to prioritizing the long-term well-being of its residents. This is shown in the careful drafting of the Annual Investment Plan (AIP), which now incorporates the Barangay Nutrition Action Planning (BNAP) and Barangay Health Action Planning (BHAP). And by making these plans official, the Barangay ensures that health and nutrition are not a one-time thing, but permanent priorities.

These plans are focused on the well-being of the community. An example is the Supplementary Feeding Program, which delivers nutritious meals and snacks over a 120-day cycle for undernourished or “at-risk” children.

To add to that, The Barangay Healthy Lifestyle Program encourages wellness through nutrition lectures, group exercises such as Zumba, and basic health screenings.

Because a plan only works if the community understands it, the Barangay has embraced Information, Education, and Communication (IEC) methods to reach every doorstep. By digitizing their Barangay Resolutions, the Council has made official decisions more organized, easy to reach and ready for implementation.

Through these determined steps, Barangay Burnham-Legarda proves that clear communication and organized planning are the important foundations for a thriving community.

BANYAGA

By Sophia Angeline G. Delantero

Ang daan papuntang Barangay Kias ay punung-puno ng buhay. May mga ngiting handang sumalubong, mga establisimyentong patuloy na naglilingkod, at mga kabundukang tila marahang humahagkan sa bawat sulok ng lugar.

Ngunit sa Kias, ang katahimikan ay hindi lamang pahinga, ito rin ay may tinatagong mga bulong. Sa bawat pader na dinadaanan, may mga nakapaskil na iilang larawan, hindi upang magpaalala, kung hindi upang maghanap. Mga mukhang pamilyar, mga pangalang inuusal sa pag-asang muli pa silang matatagpuan. Sa likod ng ganda at kapanatagan ng kanilang mumunting lugar, may mga kuwentong hindi naibubulong nang malakas, mga pangambang pilit ikinukubli, mga gabing hindi ganap at mahanap ang salitang pahinga.

Hindi na rin naman ito bago sa kanila. Hindi na rin bago ang pakiramdam na sa loob ng sariling tahanan na dapat sana ay kanlungan ay may bahid ng pangamba.

Hindi ba't ang tahanan ay dapat komportable? Isang lugar kung saan malaya kang huminga at magpahinga? Subalit para sa ilan, ang pakiramdam na ito ay nagiging bago, o kung tawagin ay banyaga. Ang katahimikan, sa mahabang daan ng Kias, ay hindi kabisado at batid ng mga residente at ng mga taong dumadaan.

Kung kaya't nakita namin ang isang pagkakataon, hindi upang magdala ng panibagong kuwento ng takot, kung hindi upang muling ipaalala ang mga bagay na dapat ay likas na nilang hawak: ang kaalaman kung paano at saan hihingi ng tulong, ang lakas ng loob na magsalita, at ang katiyakang hindi sila nag-iisa.

Kung kaya't laging tatandaan, ang kapayapaan ay hindi pribilehiyo, ito ay karapatan ng bawat mamamayan.

ANNINAW

On a warm morning in Barangay City Camp Proper, the sun suffuses a community in motion. Jeepneys roar to life, a newly opened mini-supermarket begins its shift, and the scent of freshly baked pastries lingers from local bakeries. Filled with shared ambitions, this is a community where every alleyway holds a story, and every resident is a stakeholder in its progress.

Beyond the convenience of local businesses and agencies like the CDRRMO, a ritual of discipline maintains the streets' pavements. Clean-up drives leave pavements pristine, yet when asked, residents expressed a desire for a neighborhood that extends its discipline beyond scheduled pursuits and into behaviors that reflect it. Beneath the surface of the convenience of residing in the community, what is City Camp Proper without its unmet needs?

This desire for lasting change is taking shape through a proactive partnership between barangay officials and third-year Communication students from the University of the Cordilleras. To some, a sign is merely a marker; here, they are the vanguards of communal order. These Information, Education, and Communication (IEC) initiatives provide not just a physical trail of progress, but a strategic effort to translate community standards into visible, daily reminders, serving as catalysts for behavioral change.

Though not appreciated by some, its visibility could heighten awareness of people who even take a moment to glance at it. From ‘Waste Segregation’ to the strict ‘Aso Mo, Tali Mo,’ these materials visualize the beginning response to a plea for discipline, bridging the gap between administrative policy and the living conduct of the community.

Ultimately, City Camp Proper without its needs is not a progressive community; rather, these needs drive a citizenry that refuses to be complacent and settle for what’s served before them. As Margaret Mead famously said, “Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world; indeed, it’s the only thing that ever has.” When a community of people participates, it ceases to be just footprints on a map but the compass that steers its progress.

HINDI LANG ITO KARATULA: ISANG TAHIMIK NA REBOLUSYON SA DISIPLINA

By Lyka Shane O. Corpuz

Sa gilid ng isang mataong kalsada sa barangay Irisan, kapansin-pansin ang isang simpleng karatula: “Ang disiplina ay nagsisimula sa maliliit na gawain.” Habang abala ang mga tao sa kanilang paglalakad, tila isa lamang itong karaniwang paalala. Ngunit para sa mga mag-aaral ng Bachelor of Arts in Communication, ito ay sumasalamin sa mas malalim na katotohanan tungkol sa paghubog ng asal sa komunidad.

Hindi man engrande ang mensahe, unti-unti nitong hinuhubog ang disiplina sa bawat indibidwal. Sa bawat tamang pagtatapon ng basura, may maliit ngunit mahalagang desisyon itong ginagawa. Para sa mga estudyante, malinaw na ang komunikasyon ay hindi lamang tungkol sa mga salita, kundi sa impluwensyang naiiwan nito sa kilos ng tao.

Nakita nila kung paano ang simpleng paalala ay nagiging tulay sa mas maayos na pamumuhay. Ang maliit na aksiyon ng bawat isa ay nagbubunga ng kolektibong pagbabago sa komunidad. Ang bawat karatula, bawat paalala, at bawat kilos ng responsibilidad ay may tahimik ngunit makapangyarihang epekto sa kalinisan at kaayusan ng barangay.

Ang gawaing ito ay nakaangkla sa Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 12, na nagtataguyod ng responsableng pagkonsumo at produksyon. Sa huli, ipinakita ng karanasang ito na ang pagbabago ay nagsisimula sa simpleng paalala at sa araw-araw na pagpili ng bawat isa, na may kakayahang bumuo ng mas disiplinado at maayos na pamayanan.

DISTRICT 5'S CLEANUP DRIVE

By Mabelle Therese B. Fernandez

In District 5, Barangay City Camp, a development communication project demonstrated the role of participatory approaches in promoting environmental action at the community level. Guided by the recommendations of the barangay's Committee on Environment, the initiative addressed immediate local concerns through a clean-up drive and targeted communication efforts.

The team worked alongside residents to clear waste and improve shared spaces, fostering collaboration and shared responsibility. This activity served not only as an environmental intervention but also as a form of social mobilization, encouraging collective participation in community development.

To reinforce these efforts, an information, education, and communication (IEC) poster was developed to promote the BARKADA sa Kalikasan program of District 5, Barangay City Camp. Designed for the youth, the material functioned as a behavioral change communication tool, aiming to raise awareness and motivate sustained involvement in environmental stewardship.

The project aligned with Sustainable Development Goal 13 (Climate Action) by encouraging local environmental action and with Sustainable Development Goal 11 (Sustainable Cities and Communities) by contributing to cleaner and more sustainable community spaces. It illustrated how grassroots initiatives can support broader global development frameworks.

In all, the project underscored the importance of development communication in facilitating engagement, promoting informed participation, and empowering communities to take collective action toward sustainable development.

LESSONS BENEATH THE RAIN

By Reisha Mae F. Valdez

The rain begins as a whisper.

For many children, typhoon season is no longer just about staying indoors. It is the sound of pounding rain through the night. It is the sight of murky water creeping closer to their homes. It is the feeling of uncertainty, of not knowing what to do.

But in Pico Elementary School Extension, a different story is unfolding.

One gray morning, the school courtyard filled with color and purpose. Bright tarpaulins displayed Go-Bag essentials, emergency hotlines, and simple safety reminders. These were part of the campaign, “Being Flood-Safe with Pico Elementary School Extension”, led by third-year Communication students from the University of the Cordilleras.

Inside the classroom, children watched animated videos with eager eyes. Pages of brochures rustled as small hands traced each illustration. “Maghanda ng Go-Bag,” one child whispered, holding on to the lesson. The campaign did more than teach. It invited children to think and act. What would you bring? Where would you go? Who would you call? Slowly, fear turned into confidence.

At home, these children became messengers of safety, sharing what they learned with their families. Knowledge moved beyond the classroom, planting seeds of preparedness.

The rains may still come, but now, so does readiness. In Barangay Pico, La Trinidad, children are no longer just waiting for the storm to pass. They are learning how to face it.

PANSAMANTALANG TAHANAN

By Justin B. Reyes

Sa Barangay New Lucban, agad mapapansin ang sunod-sunod na mga apartment at boarding house na tila bumubuo sa pagkakakilanlan ng lugar. Sa bawat eskinita, kapansin-pansin ang dami ng mga nangungupahan na umaasa sa lugar bilang pansamantalang tirahan. Dito, malinaw na ang komunidad ay hindi lamang binubuo ng mga permanenteng residente, kundi pati ng malaking bilang ng renters na araw-araw na nakikipagsapalaran sa limitadong espasyo at impormasyon.

Sa isinagawang pakikipag-ugnayan at panayam, lumitaw ang isang mahalagang pangangailangan. Marami sa mga nangungupahan ang walang sapat na kaalaman tungkol sa kanilang mga karapatan at responsibilidad. Para sa ilan, ang pagrenta ay isang simpleng kasunduan lamang, walang malinaw na pag-unawa sa legal na aspeto nito. Ang kakulangan sa impormasyong ito ay nagbubukas ng posibilidad sa hindi pagkakaunawaan, at minsan ay sa hindi patas na sitwasyon.

Dito nagiging mahalaga ang development communication na nakatuon hindi lamang sa pagbibigay ng impormasyon kundi pati sa pagpapalakas ng kakayahan ng komunidad. Sa pamamagitan ng Rent Smart Campaign, sinikap na tugunan ang puwang na ito sa kaalaman sa pamamagitan ng pamamahagi ng brochure na inaprubahan ni Atty. Simpson Tade Baldo, at isang audio-visual presentation na siya rin ang tampok, kung saan nagbigay-linaw siya sa mga batas at karaniwang sitwasyong kinakaharap ng mga renters.

Sa huli, ang nakita sa Barangay New Lucban ay higit pa sa mga gusali at mga inuupahang kuwarto. Isa itong komunidad na may malinaw na pangangailangan para sa tamang impormasyon at gabay. Sa tulong ng mga inisyatiba at pakikipagtulungan sa barangay, ang pansamantalang tahanan ay maaaring maging mas ligtas, mas malinaw, at mas makatarungan para sa lahat.

MILO, ANG PUSANG BAYANI: SINING NG PAGBASA SA SALUD MITRA

By Allayza Crizzette O. Tolentino

Muling napatunayan sa Barangay Salud Mitra na mabisang sandata sa pagkatuto ang sining sa pamamagitan ng proyektong “Theatflix: Milo, the Brave Little Cat.” Noong Marso 2026, pinangunahan ng mga mag-aaral ng Bachelor of Arts in Communication 3 ang interaktibong storytelling session na ito upang pasiglahin ang hilig sa pagbabasa ng mga kabataan.

Bilang bahagi ng programang Barangay Pagbasa ng DepEd, nakatuon ang "Theatflix" sa pagpapahusay ng kakayahan ng mga bata mula nursery hanggang Grade 6. Sa pamamagitan ng kuwento ni Milo, isang pusang nagpakita ng katapangan sa gitna ng unos, naibahagi sa mga kalahok ang halaga ng pagtutulungan at ang diwa ng pagiging “Baguio Brave.”

Binigyang-diin ni Kagawad Virgilio Escano, pinuno ng Committee on Education, ang kahalagahan ng pagkakaisa: “This program is for the future of our children. Your cooperation makes a difference.” Layunin ng inisyatibo na magbigay ng masayang espasyo para sa pag-aaral sa labas ng pormal na paaralan.

Alinsunod sa Sustainable Development Goals 4 (Quality Education) at 11 (Sustainable Cities), nagtampok ang aktibidad ng theatrical show, face painting, at oras para sa pagbabasa gamit ang koleksiyon ng barangay. Sa huli, ginawaran ang mga bata ng badges bilang simbolo ng kanilang tapang at talino.

Sa temang "Building a Community of Readers, One Child at a Time," patuloy na nagliliyab ang pag-asa sa Salud Mitra, patunay na ang pagkakaisa ang susi sa isang matalinong kinabukasan.

QUIET WHISPERS OF CHANGE

By Rhianne B. Sarsagat

In communities like Barangay Irisan, particularly in the sitios of San Carlos Heights, meaningful change does not always begin with large-scale programs or visible infrastructure; it begins with quiet awareness. The initiative, “Malinis na Irisan, Ligtas na Pamayanan,” is not only about delivering information on waste segregation, water sanitation, and community safety, but also about recognizing how such information is received, interpreted, and understood.

Efforts unfolded through intentional, close interactions with residents. The team engaged in conversations, encouraged feedback, and transformed shared narratives into tangible knowledge and materials. This process reflected a dynamic exchange where people listening, questioning, and responding to community concerns. Rather than a one-way dissemination, it became a shared space where ideas were clarified and meaning was collectively constructed. In these moments, awareness evolved beyond a concept into a foundation for development.

(Group visit to Barangay Irisan to formally submit the produced IEC materials for “Malinis na Irisan, Ligtas na Pamayanan.”) - Photo by John Larry “Lala Dy” Agtarap

In the initiative recognized that information alone is insufficient. In many communities in Baguio, messages are often overlooked due to differences in language, interpretation, or familiarity. By bridging these gaps simplifying concepts and grounding them in lived experiences the team ensured that residents were not passive recipients. Waste segregation became a practical habit, water sanitation a means of protecting family health, and community safety a shared responsibility.

Thus, awareness became transformative, bridging knowledge and action. As understanding deepened, change became tangible and achievable. Through continuous dialogue, responsibility grew, fostering empowerment and gradual yet lasting transformation within the community.

DEVELOPMENT COMMUNICATION AND PARTICIPATION

By Jan Vicente B. Pekas

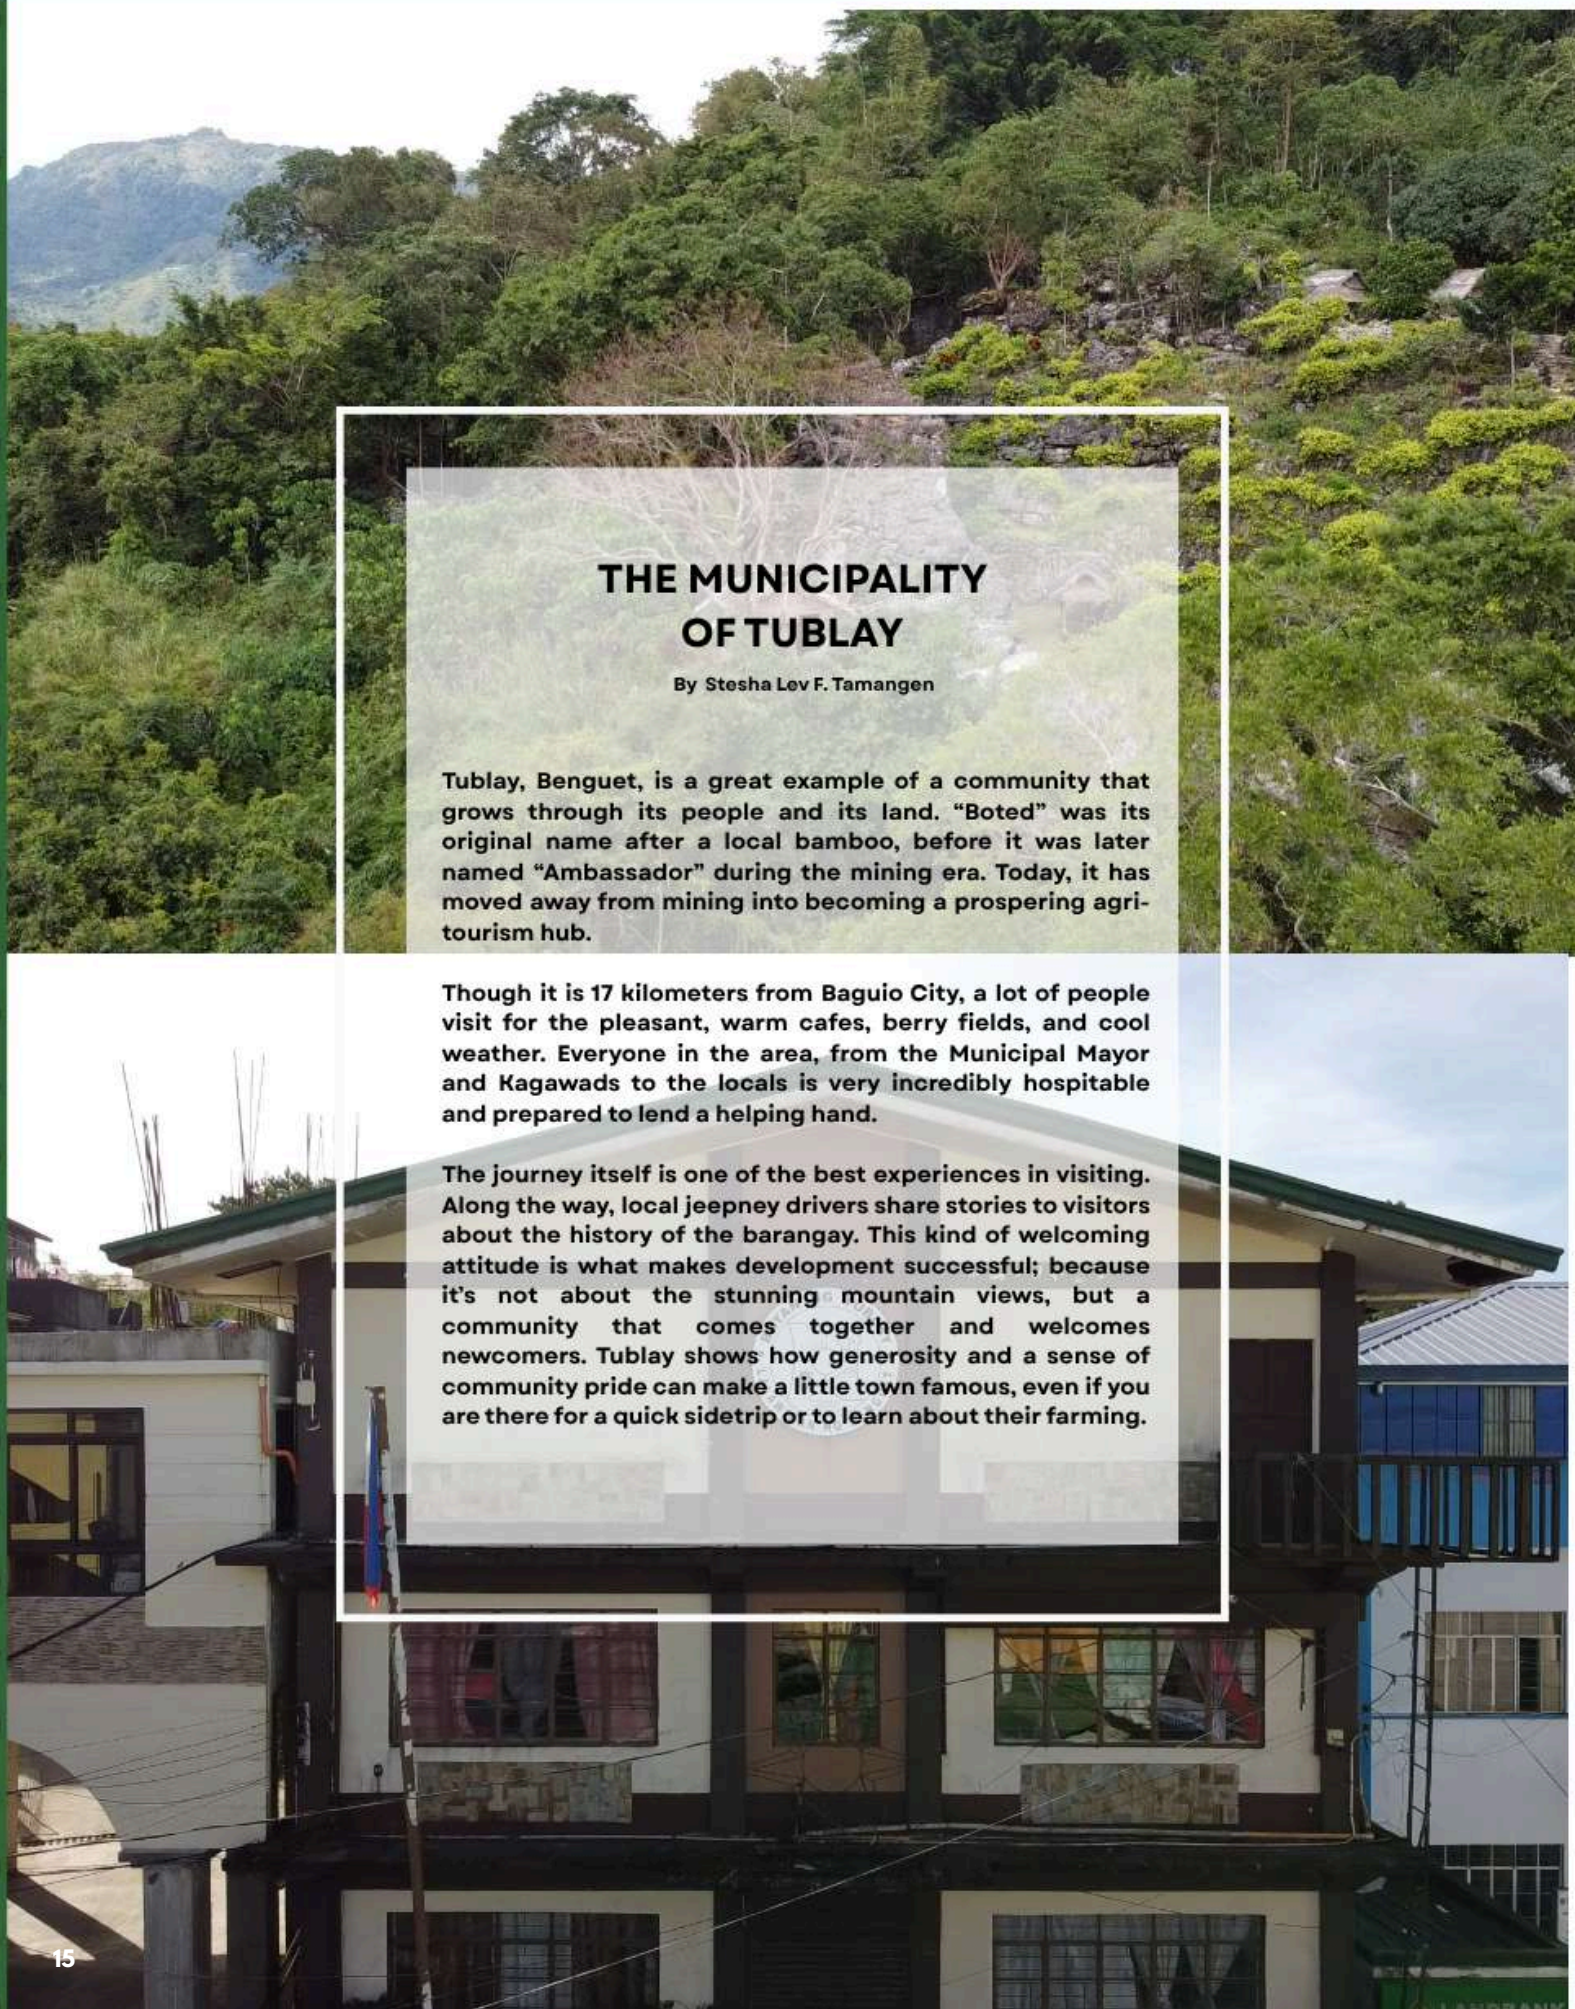

Development in the nation is all too often reduced to mere trophies for politicians to parade around in their own campaigns. When the supposed development meant to address the needs of the community comes from a selfish agenda, then development becomes nothing more than a poster, a mere display of “development” with little to no improvement for the lives of the people.

The participatory approach in development communication addresses this by actively involving the community in development initiatives. From planning to execution and evaluation, people take part to ensure that the needs of the masses are addressed and that development actually improves the community.

In this day and age, students' outlook toward this approach reinforces its core meaning. That people themselves, when motivated, informed, and empowered, are drivers of change in their communities.

But perhaps due to recent scandals, voices questioning the longevity of projects under this approach arise. It is no wonder that many people have become more skeptical of the government’s ability to facilitate the nation’s development when scandals and infighting among leadership are all they see in the news.

As the task of development is often left in the hands of the people, the younger people become more creative. Social media has become a vital medium in information dissemination, as students take advantage of its ability to reach more people. Advocacies and developmental projects by students use social media to spread awareness and rally local communities, ensuring that development is started, sustained, and felt by the people.

THE MUNICIPALITY OF TUBLAY

By Stesha Lev F. Tamangen

Tublay, Benguet, is a great example of a community that grows through its people and its land. “Boted” was its original name after a local bamboo, before it was later named “Ambassador” during the mining era. Today, it has moved away from mining into becoming a prospering agri-tourism hub.

Though it is 17 kilometers from Baguio City, a lot of people visit for the pleasant, warm cafes, berry fields, and cool weather. Everyone in the area, from the Municipal Mayor and Kagawads to the locals is very incredibly hospitable and prepared to lend a helping hand.

The journey itself is one of the best experiences in visiting. Along the way, local jeepney drivers share stories to visitors about the history of the barangay. This kind of welcoming attitude is what makes development successful; because it’s not about the stunning mountain views, but a community that comes together and welcomes newcomers. Tublay shows how generosity and a sense of community pride can make a little town famous, even if you are there for a quick sidetrip or to learn about their farming.

TAKOT, TIWALA, AT PANANAGUTAN

By Justin B. Reyes

Sa pagbuo ng Rent Smart campaign, isang tahimik na tensiyon ang unti-unting lumitaw. Hindi ito lantaran, pero ramdam sa pagitan ng mga salita. May isang landlady na nagsabi ng kaniyang pangamba. Baka raw magkaroon ng pagsalungat, baka magdulot ng problema ang simpleng pamamahagi ng brochure at ang pagbuo ng isang online community.

Kung nakabatay ito sa batas at sinuri ng isang abogado, saan nanggagaling ang takot?

Marahil hindi sa impormasyon. Marahil sa epekto nito.

Kapag ang isang tenant ay may alam, nagbabago ang tindig. Hindi na siya basta nakikiusap, natututo siyang magtanong. Hindi na siya tahimik, nagkakaroon siya ng lakas ng loob na magsalita. At doon nagiging hindi komportable ang ilan.

Hindi dahil may mali, kung hindi dahil may nababago. At hindi lahat handa sa pagbabagong dala ng kaalaman. Sa mga ganitong sandali, mas naririnig ang kaba kaysa sa katotohanan.

Ngunit hindi ba iyon ang tunay na layunin ng komunikasyon? Hindi para manggulo, kung hindi para magbigay-liwanag sa mga bagay na matagal nang nasa dilim. Kung ang ugnayan ay patas, hindi ito masisira ng kaalaman. Sa halip, lalo itong titibay.

Sa dulo, ang tanong ay hindi kung dapat bang matakot. Kung hindi kung bakit may kinatatakutan sa isang bagay na dapat ay malinaw, tama, at para sa lahat

PROMISE AND REALITY: A DEVELOPMENT COMMUNICATION JOURNEY IN TUBLAY, BENGUET.

By Rhianne B. Sarsagat

The journey to Barangay Ambassador in Tublay, Benguet portrayed more than just an ecotourism potential but exposed the realities of community commitment in Development Communication.

On March 18, 2026, the first visit of the third-year Communication students from the University of the Cordilleras executed a formal consultation with key stakeholders. They showcased a strategic plan that aimed to enhance local ecotourism through capacity-building for tourist guides, livelihood programs for creatives, and the development of illustrated communication materials. The discussion fostered coordination and accumulation of the endorsement of municipal leaders. The Municipal Mayor expressed support to the project, pushing for the formalization of the collaboration through a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA)

Despite the approval of the first visitation, on March 30, 2026, just 12 days apart, the experience exhibited a contrasting feeling. The students returned to present the concrete strategies, coordinated an implementation plan, and gathered further feedback. Regardless of the prepared and structured presentation, the reaction and response from the Barangay kagawad was hesitant. The hesitation made participation minimal, creating a wall from establishing significant dialogue.

The results of the proposed plans were not fully accepted. A shift that highlighted the critical challenges in development work.

Eventually, the two visitations have taught a crucial lesson to the students, that Development Communication is not merely about delivering resolutions and answers to limitations, but also building trust and a vision that aligns with the perspective and purposes of stakeholders and navigating the complexities of stakeholder dynamics within the community.

SIKHAY

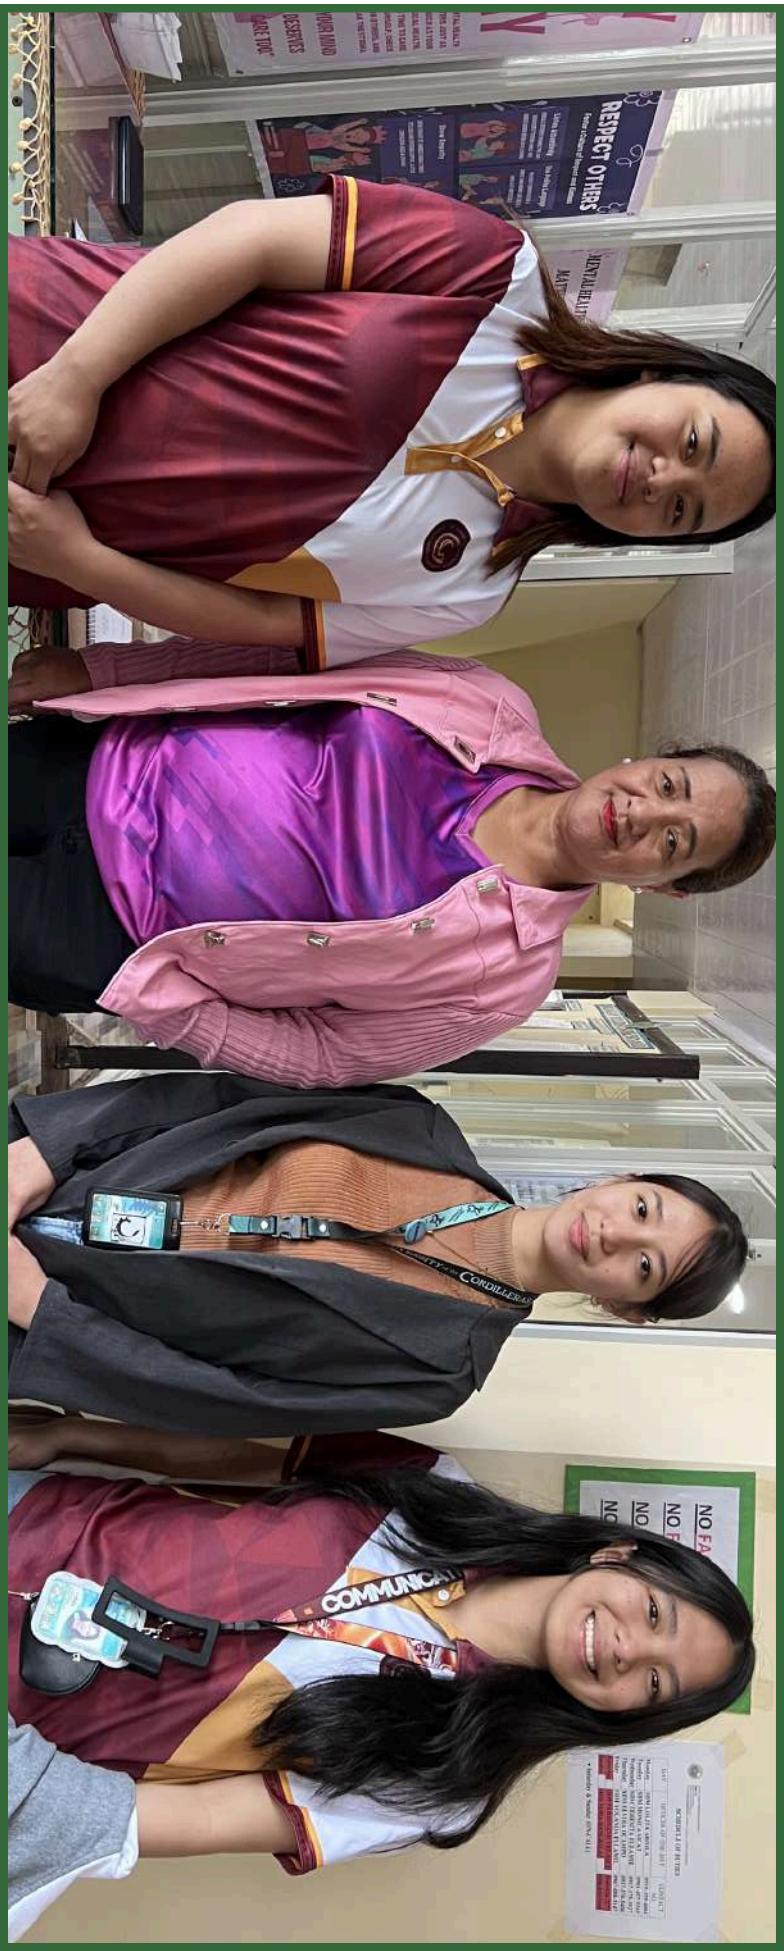

By Xyerelle Shae J. Agustin

Reflecting on our recent time in Barangay City Camp, I realized that true community service is not always about massive infrastructures. We set out with a simple goal, to help improve local communication through better information materials. What we found was a neighborhood already buzzing with potential, just needing an extra hand to bring their ideas to life.

The officials showed us their gratitude and a shared vision for a more organized community. Through interviewing the residents and working closely with Kagawad Nora Bangkilas, we learned what we had to do. We focused on clear signages for “No Parking”, “No Smoking”, and pet responsibility reminders like “Aso Mo Tali Ko.” They even shared the official barangay logo to give our designs the weight of an official message.

Throughout the design process, we embraced the spirit of sikhay, a deep Tagalog word that translates to diligence. The word perfectly captured our journey; it was full of grit and dedication into making sure every sign was clear and easy to understand. Now that the samples were turned over for approval, our hearts are truly full.

There is an incredible sense of joy in knowing that our sikhay might help someone find their way or make the streets a little safer. All the genuine smiles and thank yous we received meant everything. This experience proved that when we lead with our hearts and listen first, we can create something beautiful that serves the public good and leaves a lasting mark on our homes.
